

AIR GAP

An Air Gap is a physical separation between the free flowing discharge end of a potable water supply into an opened or non-pressurized receiving vessel. The distance between the two shall be twice the diameter of the supply line no less than 1”.

This type of backflow preventer is used in health hazard applications. An Air Gap is the highest degree of protection for a potable water system.